

IEGOR VYSHNEVSKYI

Assistant Professor | Ph.D.

Central banking researcher and Data Scientist with an extensive finance background.

Have gained solid ground in the financial services and regulation industry over more than 10 years and strive to apply banking for good.

My research interests lie mainly in central banking, including nonperforming loans, banking supervision, climate risk in banking and finance, transparency, independence, monetary policy communication, and sustainable central banking with application of data science tools (NLP, ML, Gen AI).
